Many an industry giant of today started as a small or medium-size industry yesterday. Yesterday it was a dream. Today it is a reality as only the best of the best succeed every dream.

The struggle to succeed is a struggle in itself. Whether it is a light industry in manufacturing, or a complex assembly-line plant, or a warehouse engaged in out-sourced packaging, or just a store with building materials, the hours are long. The nights are short and the problems are many and varied.

One day it could be a hijack of your goods in transit, or mounting claims of work injury compensation or loss of a contract from damaged goods. When the going gets tough, only the tough get going. Many try but few succeed.

Only the unsung heroes who followed their dream and persisted can eventually succeed and see their fledgling companies grow and grow. They have the makings of an MNC. Like you, every chief executive officer heading an SME aspires to be in this enviable status.
