Etiqua Extends RM5,000 Cash Relief Benefit to Year End for Either Etiqua Life Insurance Policy or Family Takaful Certificate Holders Diagnosed With Covid-19

Lanjutan bantuan kewangan itu adalah untuk pemegang polisi individu dan pemegang sijilnya yang didiagnosis Covid-19 oleh mana-mana hospital yang dikenalpasti oleh Kementerian Kesihatan berkuat kuasa serta-merta sehingga 31 Disember 2020.

Bantuan kewangan itu bagaimanapun tidak terpakai untuk polisi atau sijil berkumpulan dengan mereka yang layak hanya boleh menuntut manfaat itu sekali sahaja bagi setiap pelanggan.

Ketua Pegawai Eksekutif Etiqua Life Insurance, Paul Low dan Ketua Pegawai Eksekutif Etiqua Family Takaful, Zafri Ab. Halim dalam kenyataan bersama berkata, Etiqua merasa terpenggил untuk terus membantu meringankan beban pesakit Covid-19 dengan menghulurkan bantuan kewangan sebanyak RM5,000.

"Hal demikian boleh dilakukan dengan memakai pelitup muka, mengamalkan penjarakan fizikal serta mencuci tangan atau menggunakan pembasmi kuman dengan kerap," katanya dalam kenyataan hari ini.

KUALA LUMPUR: Raymond Ong Eng Siew has been appointed the new chief executive officer of Etiqa Insurance Singapore, effective Tuesday.

Etiqa said in a statement that Ong reports directly to Kamaludin Ahmad, group chief executive officer of Etiqa Insurance & Takaful.

Kamaludin said as a leading Asean insurer that has seen strong growth in its overseas operations in recent years, he was delighted to welcome Ong into his new position.

"Raymond's deep experience in the regional and local insurance market and track record of strategic leadership will be an invaluable addition to the business as we further scale and bolster our capabilities.

"We look forward to seeing him further drive Etiqa's commitment to creating Fast & Easy experiences for our customers. I am confident that under his leadership Etiqa Insurance Singapore will continue to realise its full potential," Kamaludin said.

As for Ong, he said the past and present management have laid a solid foundation and propelled Etiqa to its current position in the industry, with fascinating speed and growth.

"I will be guided by Etiqa's promise to humanising insurance and look forward to delivering innovative and customer-first product propositions and services to the market as we strive towards the best outcomes for our customers, partners and stakeholders," Ong said.

He is responsible for driving the life and general insurance business and overseeing the performance of Etiqa Insurance Singapore.

He has more than 27 years' experience in the financial services and insurance industry, having held a broad range of senior management roles during his career with experience in actuarial, product development, risk management, and strategic finance.

Ong joins Etiqa Insurance Singapore from Great Eastern Life Assurance Co Limited where he was group chief risk officer, overseeing all aspects of risk management and compliance for the group, including financial, operational and technology risk management, as well as regulatory compliance and market conduct.

Free breast screening for underprivileged women

METRO NEWS

Monday, 12 Oct 2020

NCSM staff at the launch of the Pink October campaign at the society's building in Kuala Lumpur.

In conjunction with Breast Cancer Awareness Month, National Cancer Society Malaysia (NCSM) and Etiqa jointly unveiled a giant banner at the society's building in Kampung Baru, Kuala Lumpur.

The aim of the campaign is to raise breast cancer awareness and highlight the importance of breast screening and early detection.

To mark the month, free mammograms for underprivileged Malaysian women and various health and awareness activities are being held throughout October.

The free mammogram programme, which is in its third phase, is committed to providing free breast screening for 6,000 underprivileged Malaysian women aged 40 and above.

This community programme, which started in 2017, has benefited more than 15,500 women with 6,000 screened in phase one (2017-2018), 5,000 in phase two (2018-2019) and 4,500 in phase three (2019 to present).

NCSM principal patron Tan Sri Rafidah Aziz said cancer screening was vital because early detection could enable expedient treatment.

"Although we are now having to contend with the Covid-19 pandemic, it should not be at the expense of undergoing breast cancer screening.

"Private sector entities, such as Etiqa, have been collaborating with NCSM for the past few years by providing financial support so that underprivileged Malaysian women can undergo free screening," she said.

Rafidah thanked Etiqa for being an effective enabler in NCSM's efforts to expand its outreach programmes and community screening for women in the country.

Maybank Ageas Holdings Bhd (MAHB) chairman Datuk R. Karunakaran said Etiqa had a vision of making the world a better place.

MAHB is the parent company of Etiqa General Insurance Bhd, Etiqa Life Insurance Bhd, Etiqa General Takaful Bhd and Etiqa Family Takaful Bhd.

"Our organisational culture is to make things fast and easy, whether it is to purchase, submit claims or receive payouts.

"We are extending that philosophy to the community by letting women know that getting screened is just as fast and easy," he added.

Karunakaran said early detection was important in improving breast cancer survival rates, especially among underprivileged women.

"We urge women who are eligible to sign up for this programme," he said.

NCSM president Dr Saunthari Somasundram said breast cancer remained the most common cancer among women globally.

According to the National Health and Morbidity Survey 2019, three in four women aged 40 and above have never had a mammogram, she said.

"The percentage of late diagnosis (stage three and stage four) has also increased, as detailed in the Malaysian National Cancer Registry Report," she said, adding that from 2012 to 2016, 47.9% were diagnosed at later stages while 43.2% diagnosed from 2007 to 2011.

"These numbers are alarming and there is a dire need to flatten the mortality curve.

"This Pink October, our message to the community is to get yourself screened," she said.
